Leaving Sweden and moving back to Brazil

It is Official!

I left Sweden on August 30th after six years. I knew there was a change in season coming and receiving the immigration notice to leave the country after denying my visa was the final confirmation.

Rich friendships and roots in Sweden

It was emotionally difficult to say good-bye to so many dear friends and my wonderful neighbours. I spent some time visiting with special friends during my last days there. I know I will be back!

One of the gifts of being in Sweden was to meet the Vingren family. The above photo shows Bertil Vingren holding the photo of his parents, Gunnar and Frida Vingren, the first Swedish missionaries to Brazil and founders of the Assemblies of God there.

Moving to Brazil...

Time to give back some to the nation and family!

After much praying, talking, changes of plans and words of wisdom, I am going back to Natal and staying close to my mom in this season of her life. I hope to get involved in the city and nation with discipleship, teaching, and preaching. I will still be linked with YWAM and Restenas, Sweden is still my YWAM base. I hope to finish the Masters degree in Discipleship and Christian formation with the University of the Nations (YWAM) as I do the thesis/ discipleship project in Brazil. I will still travel with YWAM to teach!

Brazil - is going through a huge transition in government and economics and violence has increased. Appreciate your prayers for the changes ahead. I am trusting God in this season and have not forgotten the call to Europe and youth.

Brazil is the next destination

Packing and moving was not easy after six years of being in Sweden.
